Reflections

By J. Hugh Sherfy, Jr.

We Need Friends

Our friends are part of ourselves. We need them as much as we need our hands, our feet, our eyes. Friends accept us for what we are, excuse our faults and praise our virtues.

They do not seek an advantage nor expect one to be taken. Their esteem is like a spring, pure, sparkling and sweet. It is an elixir, giving us courage and happiness.

A brother is precious; he is part of us and we love him for that reason. A friend has no bloodties yet he is part of us, through fusion of interests, understanding and love that emerge from the depths of our inner consciousness. We need friends as much as a plant needs sunshine.

To cultivate friendships is to build cathedrals.
